

Please be advised that I am currently protected under Indiana's Telephone Privacy Law against unwanted phone solicitations. Before this law was in place I was plagued with unwanted telephone solicitations. My phone would ring at the most inconvenient times, sometimes as late as 9:00 p.m. Never a day would pass that I didn't get at least 2-6 calls from solicitors. It got to a point that I was unable to be kind to these poor souls on the other end of the phone trying to make a paycheck. My personal time was eaten alive with this inconvenience. Since Indiana enacted the telephone privacy law, I can once again truly have a quiet evening at home after a hard day's work. Therefore, the FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protection!!! If you wish to help protect our privacy, implement your proposal, but allow State law to hold precedence over the national standards and allow the national standard to be the minimum standard for the companies who encourage these harassing phone calls. By the way, I personally have never, and would never buy anything from this type of solicitation!! Thank you for your attention to this matter.
